I feel truly empathetic to those business owners who have conveyed a message of lost hope and those that have already quit because of factors related to the pandemic. But aside from some that have inadvertently increased their businesses because of the nature of what they do, there are those that are keeping the faith and hanging in there, wrestling with the new circumstances seemingly out of their control. These are the folks I want to address.

Although visiting with a new client is currently not number one on the table, there is still the phone, emails, face-to-face online technologies, social media, and of course, a website. But although my business revolves around things like those and other advertising and marketing services, I am still better known for my out-of-the-box strategies on everything.

So while I tout myself as the “cheap” alternative for things you have to actually pay me for, I give you something that you shouldn’t pass up; Free Consultation. And just like we used to do at many of the advertising agencies I worked for, "brainstorming" produced some of our greatest ideas. So if you’re on the fence about what to do about your struggling business, any business at all, why not brainstorm with me? I won’t press you to do business with me and I love to schmooze. Let’s talk. 516-510-3803. Enjoy the day. Barry
